Dear Admiral Raborn:

Lieutenant General August Schomburg, USA, Commandant of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, joins me in extending to you a most cordial invitation to address the two Colleges in joint assembly on the subject, "The Intelligence Community," at 8:45 a.m., Friday, 1 October.

The purpose of this address is to examine the intelligence responsibilities of the various U. S. Government agencies in the process of national security policy formulation, and the Central Intelligence Agency's responsibilities for coordinating and providing world-wide intelligence. I hope that the classes of both Colleges will have an opportunity to hear you discuss the role of the CIA in the process of national security decision-making, the Agency's relations with Congress, and some of the problems of running an intelligence agency for an open and democratic society. At this stage of the academic year, our interest will be focused not so much on the substance of intelligence or policy, but how they are developed and interrelated, and the problems involved.

As you know, the policy of the two Colleges of holding all of your remarks in strictest confidence permits you to discuss your subject freely and with complete candor.

Following your address, the War College is planning to have its annual briefing at CIA Headquarters on 4 October. A number of officials of the Agency usually brief us at that time on the organization and work of its various divisions.

In the event you desire additional information or assistance in preparing your address, please do not hesitate to call on any of us here at the College. Mr. Philip Axelrod, telephone OXford 5-8389, the Director of the Course which includes your lecture, is our faculty member most familiar with the scope and purpose of your topic. He will be available to you at any time after 1 July.

We sincerely hope that we shall have the pleasure of welcoming you to the two Colleges on 1 October.
